the many at the expense of the few. The principle of giving cumulative votes will leave no occasion for this kind of dissatisfaction so far as the city of Sydney is concerned. If this principle is properly worked those who have little will have no ground for complaint, while those who have much will have none for grumbling.

The provisions which the new Act makes for the enlargement of the Council's resources are of greater importance than those which are made for the increase of its members. Powers are given to tax unoccupied land, and to assess Government property. The sponge, as will be remembered, has been applied to the half million sterling or more which the Council has so long owed to the Government, and an endowment of £25,000 a year is to be supplied out of the general revenue for the next ten years. This endowment, however, is not to exceed the proportion of £1 for each pound raised by the city rate, in excess of one shilling in the pound of the assessed annual value of city property. In future the city rate cannot exceed two shillings, but it must be sufficiently in excess of one shilling to produce a sum equal to the £25,000 a year which is to come from the public revenue. It is as well that the public should note this, since the experiment of angling for the votes of the populace by pandering to their prejudices is again being attempted. It is to be regretted that there are audiences to be found in the city of Sydney who are prepared to condemn any additional taxation as a public evil, and still more to be regretted that there should be candidates for municipal honours, who regard their participation in these views as a qualification for a seat in the Council. Surely the present is not the time for preaching this doctrine. The insufficiency of the funds at the command of the Corporation to carry on the affairs of the colony has been insisted upon by the adherents of previous years past; unless therefore the citizens of Sydney hold that it is the business of Parliament to supply not only a portion of the funds necessary to the government of the metropolis, but to furnish the whole without appealing to the citizens' pockets at all, it is absurd to contend that the present rate of taxation is quite high enough for all purposes. The proper accompaniment of the privilege of self-government is the obligation of self-support. Candidates for aldermanic honours would be far better employed in reminding their adherents of this than in decanting upon the evils of fresh taxation.

After the trial that followed the elections to the City Council last year, it may not be amiss to remark that the new Corporation Act contains a series of fresh bribery clauses which will be found inconvenient to those who are in the habit of tampering with voters. By these clauses, any candidate who attempts to influence an elector by giving him liquor, by supplying him with meat, drink, lodging, or horse or carriage, will be liable to the penalty of having his election declared null and void. There is plenty of room for the operation of clauses of this import. Open bribery has become a thing of the past, and even the devices by which bribery has been cloaked are very much rarer than they used to be. The tendency of the day, however, is not to do away with bribes, but to substitute one class of bribes for another. Votes are no longer bought and sold, but there are still candidates who are prepared to descend to any artifice, and to adopt any opinions that may suit a flexible majority. To such candidates, the bribery clauses of the new Act may supply a wholesome warning. It will be the fault of the citizens if this Act do not work a vast change in our civic affairs. Let the middle classes throw off their lethargy and address themselves to their public duties, let proper men be chosen to fill the new seats in the Council, let petty private interests be treated as the secondary consideration, and the public good as the primary one, and the new Act will not fail to work the revolution which has so long been looked for in vain.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Continental Press, according to one of our special cable messages of this morning, appears to be far more satisfied with the speech of the Premier of England, delivered at the Lord Mayor's banquet on Monday, than the English Press, which we were told yesterday, regards the speech as disappointing. Another of our messages announces an alliance for defensive purposes, between the Principalities of Servia, Bulgaria, and Montenegro, binding these three countries to provide an army of 230,000 men when necessary to oppose an Austrian advance beyond Novi-Bazar.

His Excellency Lord Augustus Loftus, who is patron of the Academy of Art, Elizabeth-street, visited the institution yesterday, accompanied by his aide-de-camp. His Excellency was received by the trustees (Mr. Fairfax, Mr. Montefiore, and Mr. Du Fau), and by them conducted through the gallery. The visit, which was the first his Excellency had made, was prolonged for about an hour, and while it lasted his Excellency made a minute and critical inspection of each picture. He expressed himself highly gratified with the collection, not only as a whole, but as typical of the artistic productions of various countries. His Excellency complimented the trustees on the judgment and good taste displayed in their selections, and expressed a hope that, at the termination of the Garden Palace Exhibition, they would be enabled to procure as a show-room and study for their pictures the Art Gallery recently erected in connection with that structure—at least until more suitable premises than those at present used were obtainable. He hoped also that, ere his term of office expired, the present collection of art treasures would be considerably augmented. During the visit his Excellency introduced to Sigismund Simetti, whom he complimented on his beautiful plastic treatment of the Venus of the South, and his marble busts of Sir Alfred Cope, Charles Godefroy, and Mrs. Clark, which are complete, and busts of Mr. Clark and Mr. P. A. Jennings, which require a few finishing touches. The compliment accorded to the accomplished Signor was as justly deserved as they were graceful and flattering, for the likenesses he has produced in the marble are wonderfully accurate. It would appear from the conversational remarks of Lord A. Loftus that his Excellency is not alone an enthusiastic admirer of fine painting, and has been to some extent a practitioner in the art, and that Lady Augustus Loftus, whose early arrival is anticipated, is practically familiar with the art also. If the patronage of her ladyship in accord with the Academy, there can be no doubt that the efforts of the trustees will have additional weight in making their institution popular.

The third annual meeting of the Health Society of New South Wales was held, last night, in the Masonic Hall, North Sydney, about 50 members were present, and the President (Sir William Macarthur) occupied the chair. The annual report proved that the society had effected some important reforms during the year, and the balance-sheet showed that it was in a good financial position. Addresses were delivered by the President, Mr. Burton Bradley, and by Messrs. Thomas, McCarthy, M. Levy, and Potts. The report and balance-sheet were adopted, and office-bearers for the ensuing 12 months were elected. A report of the proceedings will be found in another page.

The usual weekly meeting of the Commissioners of the International Exhibition will be held this afternoon, at half-past 3 o'clock.

The appeal usually heard at the Court of Quarter Sessions will be heard next Saturday, at 10 a.m., at the District Court, not at the Darlinghurst Courthouse.

In the Jury Court, yesterday, Mr. Justice Winder and a jury of four disposed of one undefended action and commenced the trial of Verge v. Oakes, an action for damages for obstructing a watercourse and flooding the plaintiff's land, known as Tennessee, on the Macleay River. Mr. Justice Faunce, in the Banco Court, presided. The trial of the case Major v. Bullock, for assault. These actions were brought before the court of Sydney, and is the only land available for the extension of the city, there is every reason to believe that the property (62 acres) would have realized a larger sum than the Government have given for it. &c.

Mungree, and the vice-chair by Mr. C. Collins, Narra. Great regret is expressed at Mr. Markham's departure.

There is now exhibition at 80, Hunter-street, a three-legged bullock, which is a rather unusual freak of nature in the bovine breed. The beast is from the Blackwall station, Hunter River, and weighs between 700 and 800 lbs., being full grown. Its two hind legs are perfectly natural, and it is in the fore legs that the malformation occurs. The off fore leg is nearly double, the ordinary size, while the near one is in size and length similar to a goat's leg, and is doubled up under the body. The near shoulder, if it can be called a shoulder, has apparently dropped down, having nothing to keep it up. The poor animal is quite lively on its three legs, notwithstanding the great weight it has to bear. The wonder is that it has managed to live so long.

The Sydney Mail, published this morning, offers a large budget of diversified and useful contents, covering the fields of literature, art, science, politics (social and Parliamentary), agriculture, fashions, pastime, mining, sports, news, &c. Perceptible in every department is the advantage of the enlarged size of the journal, and the numerous illustrations, with the clear printing, and an attraction to the eye.

One of the most beautiful orchids we have ever seen is now on view at Messrs. J. Graham and Co.'s stall, George-street Market. It is called Lecidea purpurea, and is a native of Brazil. It grows two feet high or more, and has light green foliage. The blossoms are so large and snowy as to render the plant one of the finest orchids in cultivation. The sepals and petals are pure white, the lip being a rich dark crimson purple; while the delicate tracery of the veins in the flower forms a most beautiful picture when held between the eye and the light. Those who admire beautiful flowers cannot do better than pay a visit to Messrs. Graham and Co.'s stall while this magnificent product is on view there.

The new assessment of city properties, upon which the city values have been enlarged for the past ten months, has been completed, and the notices are now being delivered in every direction. It may be as well to draw attention to the requirements of the new Corporation Act with regard to appeals against the valuation placed upon houses or lands, as they differ from the regulations of previous Acts. It is expected that the whole of the notices will be served by the first week in December, and persons intending to appeal must deliver to the Town Clerk within fourteen days from the expiration of that time, notice in writing stating the grounds upon which they object to the assessment. It adds nothing to the cost of production, but it aids greatly to the price of commodities which the consumer has to pay. Scarcely anywhere is there a greater difference between first cost and the retail price than there is in Sydney for a large class of articles, notwithstanding the competition of free trade. The two main reasons are that there are too many intermediate profits to be made between the producer and the consumer, and that the population of the colony is not large enough to afford full scope for the play of competition. This was agreed to on a division of 37 to 5.

Several persons were arrested by the police, to-day, for uttering counterfeit half-crowns.

NEWCASTLE.

TUESDAY.

A small wooden building adjoining the Crystal Palace Hotel, Newcomen-street, and occupied by Mrs. McLaren, restaurant-keeper, took fire this morning shortly after 10 o'clock, and a quantity of bedding and some few articles of furniture were destroyed before the fire was extinguished, causing damage to the extent of about £10. The fire-engine was brought on the scene, but its services were not required. The cause of the fire has not transpired.

GUNNEDAH.

TUESDAY.

Mr. T. G. Dangar, member for the Gwydir, was entertained at a public banquet here last night. Mr. T. K. Abbott occupied the chair, and there was a large attendance, including many visitors from the metropolis. Mr. Dangar was presented with a handsome illuminated address and silver inlaid. The townsmen escorted him into Gunnedah, headed by the local band.

The weather is fine.

FORBES.

TUESDAY.

A man named Henry Pickering fell backwards from a height of 34 feet on Monday last at the Good Templars' demonstration, while untwisting the rope of a swing. He fell on his back, and everybody expected he was smashed. It is now reported that he is in a fair way of recovery, with no permanent injury and not a bone broken.

The Forbes Railway League are sending copies of their petition to all members of the Assembly, asking their support when the matter shall come before the House.

The contractor for the new post and telegraph office has commenced work.

The block of ground known as the late Mrs. Atkins's, opposite the Bank of New South Wales, was sold by auction to-day for £1,750; the purchaser was Mr. Eyre, the present lessee.

YASS.

TUESDAY.

Mr. Conroy, licensed surveyor, has just reached Yass, and stated that he found the remains of an apparently young man in a bark midden on the Barren Jack Mountains, near Chidlow station. The body is supposed to have been dead about twelve months: a swarthy, containing a variety of articles, done up in a most careful manner and evidently with the utmost deliberation, was found near the body, but there was no food of any description. Sub-inspector Brennan has dispatched two mounted constables to bring the remains to Yass.

Yesterday evening an aboriginal named Jacky King, of the Burrowa tribe, was killed by falling off a tree at North Yass. An inquest is considered unnecessary.

The case Sheafe v. Hungerford, a partnership dispute, was commenced to-day in the Supreme Court. The defendant is a member of the New South Wales Parliament.

VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, THURSDAY.

In the Assembly to-day, much amusement was caused by Mr. Tytherleigh, a Government supporter, giving notice of motion.—"That, in the opinion of this House, a change of Ministry is necessary." The peculiarity of the hon. member added to the amusement. Sir Bryan O'Loughlin, in reply to a question, said that steps would be taken by bill to represent art union lotteries. Mr. Longmore admitted the necessity for amending the Land Bill. He said he had recently ridden through twenty miles of country where the wheat crop did not produce more than four bushels to the acre. Some discussion then took place on the Stamp Tax Bill and the form of the preamble, and the Government were urged to send it up to the Council in two parts. After some discussion and a slight uproar the matter was postponed till Tuesday. The House then proceeded to consider a motion, on going into Committee of Supply, for the appointment of a Committee to inquire into the working of charitable institutions. A suggestion was made that there should be an official visit made annually to lunatic asylums, where it was stated that a number of persons were confined who were really not insane.

The Dwyer case came before the Court to-day on an application for a rule nisi for sequestration. The debt was £172, and Dwyer's friends offered £40 to the bank, which was refused, and the matter was adjourned for a week.

The weavers who struck at the woolen mills, Yarraville, yesterday, returned to work to-day, with a slight reduction of wages.

A deputation from the Oxley Farmers' Union saw the Premier to-day, and asked that additional duties be levied on cereals and stock. Mr. Berry said it was impossible to do anything this session, but in a few months there would be a new Parliament, and a new tariff would be one of the principal things the House would have to deal with.

The trial of the Provincial and Suburban Bank directors will not take place till next sittings of the Court.

The new viaduct over the river Plenty will be opened by the Minister for Works on Friday next.

NEWCASTLE DIOCESAN SYNOD.

(By Telegraph.) (From Our Own Correspondent.)

WEST MAITLAND, THURSDAY.

A Special Synod of the diocese of Newcastle, convened by Archdeacon Child, Vicar-General, for the purpose of assenting to the bill recently passed in the Provincial Synod for the incorporation of the Church of England, was held to-day, and was attended by seventeen of the clergy and nine lay representatives. Divine service was held at St. Paul's, and the Holy Communion administered, after which the members met in the Grammar School. At the outset of the proceedings the Rev. W. S. Wilson handed in a protest against the legality of the meeting, arguing that the Archdeacon had no power to call a Synod more than once a year, except in cases provided for by special ordinances. After much debate a resolution sustaining the protest was carried on show of hands. Archdeacon Child then declared the business at an end; but an opportunity was taken to read the correspondence forwarded by Dr. Pearson, Bishop elect, and to enter upon the question of a scheme for the foundation of a Grammar School out of the sum of money paid by the Government for the Honey-suckle Point property, now amounting to £13,000.

AMUSEMENTS.

THEATRE ROYAL.

The concluding performance of "Struck Oil" and the "Chinese Question" are announced, and the fact that these remain but few opportunities more of seeing these match-making pieces seems to have added considerably to the number of the patrons of the Theatre Royal. Last night that theatre was again filled in every portion by an audience that seemed to have come together especially for the purpose of enjoying the pieces produced. To-night that programme will be finally repeated, and on Saturday night H.M.S. Pinafore will be performed.

SYDNEY INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.

The attendance at the Exhibition yesterday was up to the average, and was composed chiefly of country people, who viewed everything with a great deal of interest.

The ethnological museum, in one of the galleries above the eastern transept attracts a considerable amount of attention, and this is not surprising, for the collection of exhibits is a very extensive and interesting one.

Opposite the Fiji Court, and within the nave, a Fiji trophy is being erected for the display of bales of cotton, specimens of native cloth, and various other articles illustrative of Fiji products and industries.

Among the visitors to be seen about the ground yesterday were children of the Protestant Orphan School at Parramatta, who had been afforded the treat of a visit to the Exhibition.

The Art Gallery claims and receives a large share of attention from the public. For the present, and in order to allow of the statuary being properly placed on view, and of the completion of other arrangements, it has been necessary not to open the gallery before noon; but we understand, it is probable that by the beginning of next week the Commissioners will be in a position to have the gallery opened at the same time as the Garden Palace—10 o'clock in the morning.

Mr. W. G. Sefton, of Oxford-street, sh. ws in the New South Wales Court, a collection of chemicals manufactured by himself. The collection embraces between two and three hundred varieties of chemicals, a great number used in medicine, whilst the others are used in the various trades and arts. On account of the large number of chemicals exhibited, only a small quantity of each is sent as a sample, on account of the large amount of space that would be required if larger quantities were sent. The chemicals where possible are manufactured from the native ores or metals, such as iron, tin, lead, quicksilver, &c. There is also a specimen of tannic acid, a substance very much used in medicine, and which is manufactured from wattle bark.

THE MUSIC AT THE GARDEN PALACE.

Yesterday, Signor Giorgi, as director of the International Exhibition music, tried a new arrangement of the orchestra by arranging the players on the ground floor of the building. The effect, especially, was good—the sound seemed to spread over a much larger area, and to vibrate with greater intensity, while the space hitherto occupied by orchestra and chorus was filled with a numerous body of earnest listeners. The principal number on the programme was the symphony of Mozart, which though a trifle less steady as regards time than its performance last week, was nevertheless very enjoyable. In addition, the band played a selection from Verdi's "Nabucco," a waltz, "Prometheus," by Strauss—previously noticed as one of the good numbers; and the charming and ever fresh "Wedding March," from Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream." The orchestral performances were so good that many earnest hopes were breathed for the continuance of these weekly treats of instrumental music. Signor Giorgi is, we understand, making vigorous efforts to secure terms for their continuance from the Commissioners, and there is much to be urged on the music subject in the permanent interests of music. Miss Alois and Miss Jessie Harrison were the vocalists. We regret to remark that the acoustic defects of the building have had a bad effect on the upper notes of Miss Harrison's voice. Miss Moon made the most of her "Waiting."

At her debut at the Brinsmead platform, Madama Summers introduced two notable first performances—"Balmoral," a highly effective reminder of Scotch music, by Sirval, and Stephen Heller's famous transcription of Schubert's song, "La Frute." This is one of Heller's happiest inspirations in the way of artistic treatment. The pianist is to be highly commended for its performance. Mendelssohn's melodious Lieder assisted in this attractive programme.

Miss Maude Fitz-Stubbs gave her first recital on the grand piano exhibited by Lipp and Sohn in the German Court; her selection included an arrangement by Juel, from Verdi's "Requiem Mass;" a Sonata Adagio, by Goebel; a Nocturne, by Boulangier, an artist whose fame is ever green in the memory of old colonists, and an "Austrian March" by the performer's teacher, Signor Giova.

118. NEW ZEALAND.

In our last notice of the New Zealand Court we referred to Gutheus and Tamm's furniture exhibit.

and we may now proceed to call attention to the cabinet work of other exhibitors, which also is shown in the front of the space, and of which we can speak only in words of admiration of the beauty of the New Zealand woods, and of commendation of the skill of New Zealand workmen. It has often been alleged with much force and apparent truthfulness, that the tendency of the times is to produce cheap but slovenly work; that, as the result of trades unions and other causes, men are concerned only to get the highest wages and to do the least amount of work for them; that the idea of the dignity of labour, as involved in thoroughness and skill, is effete; and that it is of more consequence to do work quickly than to do it well. We hope, for the sake of the industrial reputation of New South Wales, the handworkers of this community will be jealous of their honour, and in examining the workmanship of New Zealand artizans, we can certainly find no cause for reproach. Their cabinet ware, their woolen manufactures, their brass foundry, their leather work—everything, in fact, bears the stamp of great skill; and we hope the effect will be to provoke emulation on the part of our own mechanics.

Among the cabinet work the large round table shown by Mr. Halcombe, the secretary to the Manchester settlement, is conspicuously pretty. The centre of the table consists of totara knot, which is more beautiful than even the root of the Californian redwood; and the rim of rewa rewa is in this specimen much darker than in the furniture already referred to, the reddish colour being due to the use of different descriptions of polish. The table, however, is exhibited for the purpose of showing the description of wood which is being burnt off in New Zealand to make room for settlement; and it is impossible not to regret that some better use cannot be found for such beautiful woods than to consign them to the flames. The totara is a lofty and spreading tree, 60 to 120 feet high, 4-10 feet diameter. The wood is very durable and clean-grained, in appearance like cedar, and works with equal freedom; it is adapted for every kind of work. It is used extensively in Wellington for house building and piles for marine wharves and bridges, and railway sleepers, &c. &c. It is a most valuable wood, when felled during the growing season, it splits freely and is durable as fencing and shingles. Taxe post and rail fences are expected to last forty to fifty years. The Maoris made their largest canoes from this tree, and the palisading of their pala was constructed almost entirely of this wood. A good deal of the lasting quality of this wood may be drawn from the fact, that in 1868, Dr. Hector discovered the stump at which Captain Cook had fallen some ninety years before, on which to fix his transit, and the wood was perfectly sound. A cabinet made by Mr. Sefton, and an inlaid chest table are exquisitely beautiful, and the furniture exhibited by Large and Townley (Napier), George Flemming (Nelson), Carl Peters (Wellington), Greenfield and Stewart (Wellington), W. Nicholson (Wellington), Stewart and Co. (Wellington), James Petherick (Wellington), is all admirable. The New Zealand red pine (Dacrydium corymbosum) has some very special recommendations to the cabinetmaker. Its wood is not unlike oak furniture, and is used in marine wharves and docks, and railway sleepers, &c. &c. ## INTERNATIONAL NOTICE.

STATIONERS' HALL.

Three years ago Stationers' Hall was opened in Sydney as a central office for the distribution of news and information over the COUNTRY AND THE WORLD, the motto of the proprietor being, the BEST article at the LOWEST price. His publications have proved a great success, for amid the difficulties of transmission and foreign trade both in the city and country, to break the rule, the proprietor has succeeded, and his business has extended only rapidly. While daily news is given, the proprietors have also added to the service—the proprietor assures them that their wants and convenience shall be more carefully studied than ever. The quality of goods shall be kept up, and the prices reduced. The proprietors are anxious to increase the facilities which are enjoyed for conducting the business.

No retail and damaged goods are kept; and, as far as practicable, every article is marked in plain figures. Every convenience for customers to write letters, leave parcels, post awhile, &c. No charge.

C. E. FULLER, Proprietor,
STATIONERS' HALL,
287, Pitt-street, George-street.

CHRISTMAS and NEW YEAR CARDS.—Just opened a large and elegant assortment.

EDWARD COLE,

Bookseller and Stationer.

Corner of George and King streets.

Extract from the SYDNEY MORNING HERALD, October 21st, 1879.

"We have received from Mr. E. R. Cole, Stationer, King and George streets, Sydney, a number of very elegant Christmas and New Year cards, some really elegant Christmas and New Year cards. They are printed on a large scale, and fit hand, and indeed look like cards which were made in England, France, and Germany. They are admirably suited for presentation at the coming Christmas season. They are all artistically and beautifully printed, and are sure to attract more than an ordinary share of attention. Some of these represent matrons and several are humorous. Most of them are scented with choice perfumes, and all have appropriate mottoes. The mechanical parts of these cards are well constructed, and the general attention appears to be paid to this branch of trade, and not it may be truly said that the skill of the artist and that of the printer have produced works which could hardly be exceeded."

TO THE PUBLIC GENERALLY.

Visitors and others wishing to purchase Goods of all descriptions are invited to look over the advertising pages of the Australian, where nearly every salable article is represented by the advertiser.

The Australian has been noted since its commencement for the style and appearance of its advertisements, on special coloured paper, and a volume through these pages will prove to the reader that the Australian is the best paper for advertising.

Advertisers are informed that they will receive a Musical Supplement with the number published on the first-class houses in Sydney.

The above, with 128 pages of choice sealing matter, constitutes a valuable addition to the magazines, and every advertiser will receive a Musical Supplement with the number published on the first-class houses in Sydney.

The Australian may be obtained from all booksellers and newsagents, and from the publishers, Messrs. Edwards, Dunlop, and Co., 144, Pitt-street.
